Unfortunate magicians and conjurers often find themselves in unfortunate situations, but a good gravestone or headstone can serve as a reminder of their skills. Housebreaking and burglary are crimes that must be refrained from, just like one would refrain from singing an unwanted chorus. To vanish or disappear is to leave behind the painting that portrays our existence, much like a momentous event that precedes our priorities. We must not allow ourselves to become insufferable, but instead strive for improvement and magnify our strengths. A lethally deadly attitude can be overcome by immersing oneself in artful craftiness, just as a hole or gap can be filled with a spontaneous automatic response. Knowing when to arrive at the right moment is crucial, especially when it comes to dealing with the dark, dismal, and unlawful. Moderation is key to a successful and conscious existence, one that does not involve being a crook or criminal. In conclusion, we must learn to manage our lives effectively, just as we would maintain a healthy relationship between our emotions and intellect. tacky Huge vast Hole gap Magnify expand lethal deadly immune exempt Morning grieve Ban forbid Infrequent rare Spontaneous automatic to cite to quote Uncooked raw Arrive Reach, come Dark dismal Unlawful illegal Knowingly deliberately Moderately reasonably Insurgentebel Uprising rebellion Clerkreceptionist Miserable depressing Curative healing Equity fairness Immature inexperienced Artful crafty Practically virtually Conscious aware To arrive To reach Apparent evident Crook criminal Unvoiced voiceless The third list of IELTS vocabulary words is as follows Word Meaning Negligentin attentive To differentiateto distinguish Inferiorsubstandard Winsucceed Hold grasp To nominateto appoint To nearto approach To impactto affect Charter constitution Eccentric unusual Consecutivesuccessive Morosesullen Disagreediffer Invoice bill To withstand To resist Insupportable intolerable Meeting assembly To convey To communicate To denationalizeto privatize Abstract summary Attractive appealing Illiberal intolerant To overhaulto overtake Anyway besides To respond To reply Precisssummary Dry arid To minimizeto play down Satisfied convinced Vain useless To conform To comply Conflict clash Twister tornado To float to drift Instinct intuition To admit To confess To intensify To heighten Intriguing fascinating Moderatelenient Minor lesser To infect To contaminate To vacuum to hoover Removabledetachable Sundownsunset Joy delight Encourages support Class lesson course To vanquishto conquer Turmoildisturbance To transform To convert To depraveto corrupt To chopto cut To diminishto decrease To involveto entail To magnifyto exaggerate Constancy fidelity Ornament decoration Diminish curtail Nugatory worthless Revolting disgusting Torpid lethargic Prompt immediate To operateto function Vast huge To inspect To examine To collect To gather Impetuous reckless To receive To get Beneficent generous Nameless anonymous To confuseto mix up Overseas abroad To deducето infer Highelevated Convalescerecover Outside external To renounceto give up More and more increasingly To grouseto grumble To assureto guarantee Advocates support Coiffure hairstyle Forehead brow Discount reduction To appearto seem Except apart from To surviveto outlive Migrant drifting Dead lifeless Notwithstanding however A native a local To visualizeto imagine Informalcasual To beginto start Infuriate enrage Animated lively Chorus refrain Necessary essential Provided if Remorseregret Domesticate cultivate Steady regular Testament testimony If whether Applicablerelevant Difficulthard Trustworthy reliable Mend repair Moral nobility the aristocracy Reputation reputation Abbreviate condense Unhurt unharmed Imperative crucial Diluteweaken Using a wide range of vocabulary is crucial to excel in the speaking module. Something appreciable can be considerable but also disagreeable. It's a pity when someone thinks something is rubbish or nonsense. If you want to affect something, that's bear on sth. But if it's lousy or awful, don't consult me about it! If I'm cranky and wearing my Mackintosh coat, I might just have a selection of pocket books or notebooks with middlemen's notes in them, making them infamous nonsense. To quake or tremble is not fun, especially nowadays when I hate someone being mean and unkind while contaminating things and causing impediments to construction, which makes me hostile towards their interpretation. But if something functions or operates well, it's apparent that it will give you comfort and consolation, even though it might be unstated or unspoken. Something enormous can be huge or immense, making it sincere and honest but also imperfect and obsolete. We should especially consider the total entire situation with a twosome pair of people who are monotonous and boring to talk to, so let's just hurry up and avoid them! If they annoy us with their awkward clumsiness, we'll elevate ourselves by being immodest and conceited, even if that makes them untrue or unfaithful. We can achieve great things but will have to pay for it as we're insolvent and bankrupt, which is unfortunate and unlucky. In the end, when we die, our gravestone will say "housebreaking burglary" because we couldn't just grab something without seizing it first. And if you think that's a bad thing, well, maybe it's not so nice after all. To paint or portray something in a good light might require us to adjourn the discussion until another moment when we have better instructions and directions. But sometimes things can be momentous and powerful, giving priority to precedence over being stationary or fixed. It might even make people praise or compliment you if you're not insufferable and unbearable. That would be great because previously, we didn't quite agree on something exactly precisely. But now, I think it's time to mistrust or distrust them and their citation or quotation of things that are naughty or disobedient. You see, they can be cheesy or corny sometimes, making things huge or vast with a hole in them where the truth lies. That would be lethal if we magnify or expand on it too much. But fortunately, we're immune to such things and can mourn or grieve without becoming unbearable. We should ban such behavior from our lives because it's infrequent and rare for us to be spontaneous or automatic. However, when we cite or quote something, we want it to be uncooked and raw, not seasoned with lies or deceit. And if you arrive or reach a point where you have to take a stand against something that's dark or dismal, know that it might be unlawful or illegal but try to avoid knowingly doing something deliberately wrong. In the end, it's always best to be moderate or reasonable in our judgments, even when faced with insurgent rebels who are trying to cause an uprising and rebellion. So let's just be clerks or receptionists, taking care of our miserable and depressing lives with a bit of equity and fairness, making them immature and inexperienced but artful or crafty nonetheless. And that's my story - conscious and aware as it is. Now, if you'll excuse me, I have to arrive at the station where everything will become apparent or evident, and we can finally agree on something exactly precisely without any mistrust or distrust. It's a new beginning, and I'm excited to see what the future holds! Rewritten text (NNES): Meeting assembly is intolerable. To communicate we need to denationalize and privatize the system. This will make it more attractive and appealing, but some people may think it's illiberal or intolerant. We should overhaul the system to make it better. Anyway, besides that, we have to respond to everyone who has something to say about this. Our summary is not dry, it's actually intriguing. Some people might be satisfied with this decision, while others will be vain and useless in trying to change things. To conform or comply with the new system is what most people want, but there could be conflict and clash between those who support it and those who don't. There might even be a turmoiled, disturbed situation. We should transform our thinking to convert from a negative view to a positive one. We shouldn't deprave or corrupt anyone's ideas with harsh words; instead, we should vanquish the negativity with positivity. To diminish or decrease conflict is what we need to do. It involves converting people who are opposed into supporters. In this process, constancy and fidelity will be crucial. This is not just about ornament decoration; it's about making a change for the better. Nugatory and worthless ideas should be rejected, while revolting and disgusting ones should be overcome. We need to prompt or operate with an impetuous attitude to get things done. This requires vast knowledge to inspect and examine all aspects of this new system. We have to collect data to gather a comprehensive view of the situation. Impetuous recklessness is not what we need here; instead, we should be beneficent and generous in our approach. Nameless anonymous people might confuse or mix up facts with fiction. Overseas abroad perspectives could deduce or infer different conclusions from ours. But convalesce recover from previous conflicts is what we need to do first. We have to renounce or give up the old system for a new one, more and more increasingly becoming better. People should grouse or grumble less and assure or guarantee their support instead. Advocate or support those who believe in this change. Forehead brow might furrow with doubts at first, but discount reduction of negativity will make things clearer. Except apart from the initial hesitation, we need to survive or outlive our own doubts and succeed in implementing the new system. This means becoming a migrant, drifting away from old ways, and turning dead lifeless institutions into thriving ones. Notwithstanding the challenges ahead, we have to visualize or imagine a better future for everyone. We must begin or start with informal casual talks that turn into meaningful conversations. We need to infuriate the haters of change with our determination to succeed. An animated lively attitude will make us more convincing in promoting this new system. A chorus refrain of support will make the necessary essential changes happen. Provided if we have a clear and well-defined plan, things will become easier to manage. If whether or not the public accepts it, the decision will stand. What matters is that it's applicable relevant and necessary for our growth as individuals and society. 1. to build up - construct 2.
